Dear User of World Book ® CD-ROM, World Book Online Reference Center and/or the World Book corporate Web site, worldbook.com:

Permission requests need not be submitted to World Book by teachers, librarians, or students when using content from World Book CD-ROM, World Book Online Reference Center, or from the World Book corporate Web site if:

1. The intended use is educational, noncommercial, and/or personal, including use in PowerPoint and similar presentations. If your use of our material involves distribution over the Intranet or Internet, or if there is doubt about whether permission is necessary, please contact the World Book Permissions Department at the above address.

Links may be only to the home page of the World Book Online Reference Center or the World Book corporate Web site www.worldbook.com. Deep linking is not allowed without permission from World Book, Inc.

2. No changes or deletions are made to World Book content.
3. Author attributions are retained/displayed in proper citation form.
4. Photo and other media attributions are retained/displayed.
5. Source of information (e.g., World Book Online Reference Center) and copyright/trademark language are retained/displayed.

If you put World Book information into your own words, you are using WORLD BOOK as a reference source. Therefore, permission is not needed.

Teachers, librarians, and students must contact World Book with details of their proposed use of content from World Book CD-ROM, World Book Reference Center, or the World Book Web site for purposes including but not limited to commercial use or inclusion in coursepack or curriculum materials that will be published and/or distributed, with or without fee, including Web pages for Intranet or Internet use. Following is basic information World Book requires to consider your request:

1. Your name, address, phone and fax numbers, e-mail address.
2. Purpose of your request, e.g., to include in a curriculum packet for distribution to 10 schools in our district; or to use on a Web page I am creating for a ThinkQuest contest.
3. Identification of the EXACT material you want to use, including article title or other identifying information, the text you want to quote, and the specific pictures, maps, or other illustrations.
4. Date you plan to “publish/submit” your material.
5. Number of copies you will be making.
6. The amount of the fee, if any, you will be charging.
7. The planned extent of distribution, e.g., U.S. only, North America, or world.

MEDIA: World Book does not own many of the media elements in its publications, such as photos, and therefore cannot give permission for their reuse, but may be able to refer you to the copyright holders. Please note the small-print credit lines that appear with the photos, maps, or other media you are interested in; only those that say “World Book photo (etc.) by...” are ours.

FEES: We generally charge a permissions fee if our material will appear in a commercially distributed work, to be determined upon review of the submitted details.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS: If permission is granted, we provide a credit line, which must be printed with our material.
